Dear Sponsor,

It's September and you can see that I'm taking you to new heights; the attached photo was taken from on top of the Rockefeller Centre. Facing North, I can give you an idea of just how huge Central Park is... 843 acres. 200 species of birds are regularly seen! It's simply incredible. This week marks the completion of the first draft of my feature film script. 108 pages about the story of "Mischief Galloway"; a female crime fighter who subdues French terrorists in New Zealand! Yes, you can safely detect that it's a comedy. Mashed up with lots of action and a little romance. Perhaps it could be the love child of James Bond and Charlie's Angels - we'll see! The script has received some great feedback and I've enjoyed writing something that one might agree steers away from the typical darkness of boutique New Zealand cinema. So many of my American classmates were flabbergasted to understand the prominence of female leadership in our country, let alone comprehending my fictitious female superhero! Hilary didn't stand a chance! I currently have one week off and my parents are over here to spend it with me. I'm very excited, because I've put off doing a lot of tourist things so that we can go on multiple expeditions together; cruising down the East River, Statue of Liberty, jazz bars. I can't wait to take my dad somewhere for great jazz as there are so many little esoteric bars that you can strike gold at with regards to awesome music. Then next Monday I will begin my second 8-week workshop in acting for film. I have a feeling this will be very interesting as the impression I've been given by recent acting students is that they like to wear their sunglasses inside and they all appear to be somewhat tortured. Stand-by for next month's post card!
